I have had the pleasure of hearing the TransAtlantic Duo and TransAtlantic Ensemble perform some of my music. They are very talented young musicians who have developed a technically impeccable and musically expressive chamber music style. They make music together bringing out the nuances of every phrase while creating a vast array of subtle timbres and sonorities.

In addition to making wonderful music on the stage, these performers have an excellent rapport with their audience. They totally engage the audience in their performance. People in the audience consistently remark on how exciting it is to watch them making the music, to see the music in their movements and facial expressions. This is quintessential chamber music - music beautifully played and expertly conveyed.
